

A visit to Guglielmo Marconi's home: Villa Griffone

Villa Griffone was Guglielmo Marconi's home. He made all his first experiments on radio communications there. Today, it hosts laboratories of the University of Bologna, two Foundations (FUB, Fondazione Ugo Bordoni, and FGM, Fondazione Guglielmo Marconi), and a museum.

For any researcher in the field of radio communications, a visit to Villa Griffone is a must-do in life. You need to go there at least once, to see the equipment he used and feel the air he felt when he invented radio communications.

Villa Griffone is located about 14 Km from Bologna, on the hills. A bus will leave on Wednesday, September 12, after the afternoon coffee break, from the conference venue. The visit will take about 1h30m. You will be brought back to the city center by dinner time.

Cost of the tour: 25 EUR/person

The tour is subject to the participation of at least 25 people. No more than 75 people can be accepted.

Booking is expected, no later than by September 2, sending an email with subject "PIMRC18 – Marconi" to socialeventspimrc2018@momedaeventi.com
